(3) If an amount falls to be deducted by virtue of paragraph (1)(a) the determining authority, in fixing amounts of remuneration for persons to whom the determination relates, may have regard to the period within which they first provided services of the description to which it relates.

“underpayment” means the aggregate of any amounts which in the authority's opinion would have been paid under the earlier determination if that determination had not been unsatisfactory, exclusive of any portion of that aggregate in respect of which an addition under paragraph (1) has already been made.

(5) If the later determination is of remuneration for a category of services falling within one of the descriptions of services mentioned in Article 64A(1) of the principal Order, it is immaterial whether the earlier determination was of remuneration for the same category of services or for any other category of services falling within the same description.
