Summary: Intervention and Options

What is the problem under consideration? Why is government intervention necessary? 1.) Section 128 of the 2007 Legal Services Act defines the categories of complaint which fall within the remit of the Office for Legal Complaints (OLC) Ombudsman Scheme. This section allows the Ombudsman to deal with complaints from consumers about the service received from an Authorised Person ¹ . 2.) As currently drafted, section 128 only provides for individuals to make complaints, which means that all other types of complainant are excluded. However, there is provision for additional categories of complainant to be added by Order of the Lord Chancellor under section 130 of the 2007 Act. 3.) The OLC has recommended to the Lord Chancellor that he make an Order to extend the class of parties which are eligible to use the Legal Ombudsman Scheme established by the Office for Legal Complaints under the Legal Services Act 2007 ("the 2007 Act"). Currently, only individuals may use this Scheme, but it is intended to expand the class of potential complainants to bring it into line with other Ombudsman schemes.
What are the policy objectives and the intended effects? The inclusion of additional parties has regard to the regulatory objective of the 2007 Act by increasing the inclusivity of the complaints process. There was concern that if not included, these categories of consumer would be financially unable to seek redress through more traditional routes, such as taking legal action and court proceedings. These groups of people are already eligible to use other Ombudsman schemes and it is felt that including these additional parties in a section 128 order will add consistency and enhance good practice.
What policy options have been considered? Please justify preferred option (further details in Evidence Base) Option 0: do nothing – continue to deny certain groups the chance to bring complaints to the Office of Legal complaints as a means of dispute resolution Option 1: Extend the number of groups that are eligible to bring complaints to the Office of Legal complaints as a means of dispute resolution
When will the policy be reviewed to establish its impact and the extent to which the policy objectives have been achieved?	It will be reviewed 10/2013
Are there arrangements in place that will allow a systematic collection of monitoring information for future policy review?	Yes

Ministerial Sign-off For final proposal stage Impact Assessments:

I have read the Impact Assessment and I am satisfied that (a) it represents a fair and reasonable view of the expected costs, benefits and impact of the policy, and (b) the benefits justify the costs.

Signed by the responsible Minister: Lord McNally Date: 17th August 2010.....

Description and scale of key monetised costs by 'main affected groups'

Other key non-monetised costs by 'main affected groups'

Costs to HMCS through a reduction in fees paid as the number of claims made under the Court system falls. Costs to solicitors through an increase in the levy costs payable by solicitors, used to fund the OLC. If the volume of complaints increases, this may lead to an increased levy and increased Practising Certificate fees. Higher volumes of complaints to OLC will increase costs to solicitors as more will be expected to obtain a 'third strike'². Furthermore, solicitors who represent complainants can be expected to suffer a reduction in business as complaints are settled through the Ombudsman scheme rather than through the courts system.

BENEFITS (£m)	Total Transition (Constant Price) Years	Average Annual (excl. Transition) (Constant Price)	Total Benefit (Present Value)
Low	Optional	Optional	Optional
High	Optional	Optional	Optional
Best Estimate	N/A	£2.1 million	N/A

Description and scale of key monetised benefits by 'main affected groups'

Benefits to HMCS of a reduced burden on the courts, equivalent to 1,300 cases a year. If all claims progress to a full trial day, costing an estimated £1,632, HMCS will realise savings in the region of £2.1 million a year. This will be offset by the reduction in fees.

Other key non-monetised benefits by 'main affected groups'

Benefits to claimants from not having to pay court fees or legal expenses for bringing complaints to the Ombudsman scheme. The Ombudsman process is also less complicated and time-consuming than hearing complaints through the courts. Benefits to HMCS of a reduced number of complaints in the court system - this will increase the overall capacity to process other caseloads and enable speedier resolution of those cases. HMCS may benefit from reduced expenditure on fee subsidisation, depending on whether fees are currently subsidised.

Key assumptions/sensitivities/risks

Discount rate (%) N/A

Estimation of monetised benefits is based on the assumption that every case reaches trial stage and that the trial involved a full day of court time before a circuit judge in a county court. Realised benefits to HMCS could vary depending on the validity of these assumptions. Though the increase in levy cost payable by solicitors has not been monetised, this depends on the number of additional cases going through the OLC, which could fluctuate annually.

Impact on admin burden (AB) (£m):		Impact on policy cost savings (£m):		In scope
New AB: N/Q	AB savings n/q	Policy cost savings: n/q	Net: n/q	No

² The basis of the three strike scheme is that solicitors will not be charged for administrative fees and investigating the first two cases against them; once a third service complaint has been proved, they will pay a penalty fee for every further case.

1. Introduction

1. 1 The Legal Services Act 2007 (“the 2007 Act”) reforms the manner in which legal services are regulated in England and Wales. In particular, the 2007 Act establishes the Office for Legal Complaints (“the OLC”) which, as the single legal complaints handling body, will deal with all service complaints made by the consumer about authorised persons (for example, solicitors). The Approved Regulators, for example the Law Society, who currently deal with all complaints against the providers of legal services, will in future deal solely with complaints relating to conduct, and will be prohibited under s157 of the 2007 Act from providing redress for service complaints.
1. 2 The OLC is required by section 115 of the 2007 Act to establish an Ombudsman Scheme to deal with the above mentioned complaints. The details of this Ombudsman service are set out on the OLC Scheme Rules which dictate who can complain, what sort of complaints can and cannot be investigated and the procedures of how the Ombudsman Scheme will operate in practice. As currently drafted, s128 of the 2007 Act only entitles individual complainants to raise their issues with the Ombudsman.
1. 3 The OLC consulted on their Scheme Rules in September 2009. Following this consultation, the OLC asked the Lord Chancellor to extend the Ombudsman’s jurisdiction to other types of complainant, which are listed at 1.9. This is possible under a provision in section 128 of the 2007 Act to allow for additional categories of complainant to be added at any time by order of the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the OLC, Legal Services Board (LSB) or the Legal Services Consumer Panel.

Economic Rationale

1. 4 The conventional economic approach to government intervention to resolve a problem is based on efficiency or equity arguments. The Government may consider intervening if there are strong enough failures in the way markets operate (e.g. monopolies overcharging consumers) or if there are strong enough failures in existing government interventions (e.g. waste generated by misdirected rules). In both cases the proposed new intervention itself should avoid creating a further set of disproportionate costs and distortions. The Government may also intervene for equity (fairness) and redistributive reasons (e.g. to reallocate goods and services to the more needy groups in society).
1. 5 In this context, the rationale for enabling new organisations and sectors to file service complaints to the OLC is based on equity and efficiency considerations. This policy change adds an element of consistency and thereby fairness, by the inclusion of more people able to seek similar methods of redress. It will also speed up complaints processes for businesses, charities and trusts and reduce costly delays for all service users in the courts system.

Affected Stakeholder groups, Organisations and Sectors

1. 6 The additional parties to be added are:-
 - a micro-enterprise (broadly an enterprise with fewer than 10 staff and a turnover or balance sheet value not exceeding £2million);
 - a charity with a net annual income of less than £1 million;
 - a club, association or organisation with a net annual income of less than £1 million;
 - a trustee of a trust with a net asset value of less than £1 million
 - a personal representative or residuary beneficiaries of an estate where a person with a complaint died before referring it to the Ombudsman Scheme.
1. 7 Other individuals/sectors that are likely to be affected by the proposals:
 - Authorised Persons;
 - HMCS;
 - Approved Regulators, (as defined in Schedule 4 of the 2007 Act to include the Law Society, The General Council of the Bar and the Institute of Legal Executives) ;
 - Members of the Public

2. Costs and Benefits

OPTION 0: Base Case (do nothing)

2. 1 This is the do-nothing option. If the status quo is maintained and an Order for the inclusion of additional parties is not made, then the OLC scheme will be out of step with other similar Ombudsman schemes in the UK and this will create inconsistency between the different schemes for consumers seeking redress and ultimately, could lead to confusion and unfairness. The current situation, as outlined in s.128 of the Legal Services Act (2007) only entitles individual complainants to have complaints heard by the Ombudsman. If no Order is made under section 128, then the 2007 Act will remain as drafted with the limited scope for complaints to the OLC. Only individuals will be able to utilise the OLC services and all other small businesses, charities and personal representatives will be obliged to seek redress through the court system. These groups will continue to bear the costs associated with taking complaints through the courts systems and the inequity and inconsistency in the current system will be maintained, especially since the parties stated in the OLC recommendation are already eligible to use other Ombudsman schemes, including the Property Ombudsman and Financial Services Ombudsman.
2. 2 Because the do-nothing option is compared against itself its costs and benefits and necessarily zero, as is its Net Present Value (NPV).⁴

OPTION 1: Extend the parties to be included in the OLC scheme

2. 3 This option is to extend the parties who may be included in the OLC Scheme, as recommended by the OLC following a consultation in September 2009. The OLC considers that part of its role is to increase the inclusivity of the complaints process by providing an alternative means of dispute resolution which is easy to understand, quick, independent and free for consumers of legal services. These parties are already recognised under other Ombudsman schemes and it is therefore just and equitable within the regulatory objectives of the 2007 Act that they are also able to complain of poor service to the Legal Services Ombudsman. These proposals aim to extend the OLC's jurisdiction to cover micro-enterprises, small charities, clubs, associations, organisations, trustees of trusts or personal representatives or residuary beneficiaries of an estate where a person with a complaint died before referring it to the Ombudsman scheme (more details outlined in paragraph 1.6, above). Currently these groups are being unduly disadvantaged if they lack the means to pursue other routes of redress, e.g., through formal court proceedings, which can be lengthy and costly.

Costs of Option 1

Ongoing costs:

Legal service professionals

2. 4 The LSB and the OLC are funded by a levy on the Approved Regulators⁵, which is paid by way of the Practising Certificate fee. An increase in the number of complaints made to the OLC is likely to lead to an increase in the cost of running the OLC and therefore a rise in the cost of practising certificate fees.
2. 5 If there are more complaints, it is likely that more solicitors will find themselves falling foul of the "third strike" rule and having to pay case fees (in the sum of £400) for each successful case against them. The basis of the three strike scheme is that solicitors will not be charged for administrative fees for investigating the first two proven cases against them. However, once a third service complaint has been proved, they will pay a penalty fee for every further case. The severity of this fine is to provide a reprimand for the solicitor, and encourage improvement in the service being provided;

⁴ The Net Present Value (NPV) shows the total net value of a project over a specific time period. The value of the costs and benefits in an NPV are adjusted to account for inflation and the fact that we generally value benefits that are provided now more than we value the same benefits provided in the future.

⁵ Approved regulator means a body which (a) is designated as an approved regulator by Part 1 of schedule 4 to the Legal Services Act 2007 (with the exception of the Master of the Faculties); or (b) falls within the definition of "approved regulator" in section 20 of the Legal Services Act 2007 and is specified in an order made by the Secretary of State for the purpose of this subsection

2. 6 If more complaints are being undertaken through the Legal Ombudsman, there will be a lessened requirement for legal representation of those complaints, as the scheme is designed for easy use by Lay persons. This may result in loss of business for lawyers who would otherwise have been representing the complainants in court.

HMCS:

2. 7 Reducing the caseload of complaints that pass through the Courts system will reduce income for HMCS through a reduction in fees paid by users. It is not possible to monetise this reduction in income since fee levels vary hugely on a case-by-case basis, and disaggregated data are not available to support this.

Benefits of Option 1

Ongoing benefits:

HMCS and Members of the Public

2. 8 There will be savings to Her Majesty's Court Service if the number of complaints being taken through the courts decreases. This is particularly true as once a final decision has been made by the Ombudsman, there is no recourse to the courts except by way of Judicial Review. It is difficult to obtain figures for the likely savings, due to the OLC being a "start up" organisation at this time and unable to give much information about the likely volume or type of cases that they will be dealing with. However, on the "worst case scenario" basis of every case reaching a trial stage, and assuming that the trial involved a full day of court time, most likely before a Circuit Judge in a County Court, then the saving per hearing would be £1,632⁶. On the understanding, again gleaned from rough estimates of likely volume of complaints, that there are likely to be circa 1,300 complaints of the type discussed per annum, then the possible saving is as much as £2.1 million per year. This amount does not consider pre trial stages;
2. 9 As there will be no reason to have recourse to the court, there will be no court fees to be paid by complainants;
2. 10 Complainants will not be required to pay for lawyers to represent them before the Ombudsman;
2. 11 As a significant number of complaints will be removed from the court system, there should be more time available for dealing with other cases. In essence, removal of over 1,000 matters from the system ought to increase the efficiency of the court and reduce waiting times. This should improve the experience of the judicial system for other users, who are involved in matters which are not able to be dealt with by another form of resolution. It should be noted that this will only affect complaints made after 6 October 2010. All complaints made up to that point will progress along the normal channels.
2. 12 Under the current court fee structure, most court fees are set to ensure full cost recovery. For equity reasons, some fees are subsidised (set below cost) to ensure access to justice. If fees for complaint cases are currently subsidised, HMCS will benefit from extending the jurisdiction of the OLC through a reduction in the cost of the subsidy. It is not possible to monetise this reduction in the level of subsidy since fee levels vary hugely on a case-by-case basis, and disaggregated data are not available to support this.

Approved Regulators

2. 13 The Approved Regulators will save money as they will no longer be required to deal with service complaints from 6 October 2010, when the complaints regime becomes operational under the OLC. This will allow them to direct all their resources towards conduct related issues.

Net impact of Option 1

2. 14 Overall it is expected that a net benefit would arise from this option in that money is saved by HMCS and by the consumer who may now utilise the OLC. This, combined with the non monetary benefit of a faster, more user friendly and independent complaints service for members of the public, will outweigh any losses caused to the profession as a whole. In addition, improving complaints procedures is likely to increase the regard in which the profession is held, which can only be a positive outcome.

⁶ This figure is the total daily cost including a judicial daily rate for a circuit judge and a daily admin cost; figures provided by HMC financial management.

3. Specific Impact Tests

Statutory equality duties

An Equalities Impact Assessment (EIA) is attached.

Competition Assessment

These proposals enable micro-firms (broadly those businesses with fewer than 10 staff and a turnover or balance sheet value not exceeding £2million) to address complaints through the OLC. There will be an impact on competition since those below the threshold will have access to cheaper dispute resolution and so will face lower costs while those above the threshold will continue to bear the costs of more lengthy dispute resolution. Micro-firms may gain a small competitive advantage relative to other enterprises, though the impact of this is likely to be minimal.

Small Firms Impact Test

It is anticipated that there will be both a cost and benefit impact to small firms if this proposal is implemented. It should be noted that “small firms” will include both small law firms and the additional parties.

Costs: The increased possibility of solicitors falling foul of the “third strike” rule, is likely to hit small businesses the hardest. This is because they are likely to have a lower turnover and the requirement to pay both the increased Levy fee (which will reach solicitors through increased Practising Certificate fees) and the £400 case fee for every subsequent successful claim against them will therefore be more difficult.

Benefits: As the Ombudsman scheme will provide a free and independent method by which to bring a service complaint against a legal professional, there will be no need to apply to the Courts for redress. This implementation of this policy, will expand the class of party which can use the Ombudsman scheme (which is at present only open to individuals) and will therefore save small businesses the time and money that they would be likely to spend attending court, paying court fees and instructing and paying a further legal professional to represent them.

Carbon Assessment

It is not considered that there will be any impact on Carbon Emissions from the implementation of this policy.

Other Environment

It is not considered that there will be any environmental impact from the implementation of this policy.

Health Impact Assessment

It is not considered that there will be any impact on human health from the implementation of this policy.

Human Rights

The policy is Human Rights Act compliant.

Justice Impact Test

Complaints that are made out-with the Ombudsman Scheme and that proceed all the way to trial will require court resources and judicial time. It is hoped that such applications will be extremely rare, as by expanding the class of complainant there will be fewer parties for whom expensive court action is the only option. Therefore the expected impact is not significant. If there is any impact, it is expected to be positive in that Court time will be made available to other types of more worthwhile action, rather than being tied up dealing with legal complaints.

Rural proofing

It is not considered that there will be any rural impact from the implementation of this policy.

Sustainable Development

This policy has no bearing on sustainable development, carbon emissions or other environmental concerns.

Privacy Impact Test (an MoJ Specific Impact Test)

It is not considered that there will be any impact on privacy from the implementation of this policy.

Annexes

Annex 1 should be used to set out the Post Implementation Review Plan as detailed below. Further annexes may be added where the Specific Impact Tests yield information relevant to an overall understanding of policy options.

Annex 1: Post Implementation Review (PIR) Plan

A PIR should be undertaken, usually three to five years after implementation of the policy, but exceptionally a longer period may be more appropriate. A PIR should examine the extent to which the implemented regulations have achieved their objectives, assess their costs and benefits and identify whether they are having any unintended consequences. Please set out the PIR Plan as detailed below. If there is no plan to do a PIR please provide reasons below.

Basis of the review: [The basis of the review could be statutory (forming part of the legislation), it could be to review existing policy or there could be a political commitment to review]; The intention is that there will be a review upon the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor. This is anticipated to take place three years from the date of OLC "Go-Live" in October 2010.
Review objective: [Is it intended as a proportionate check that regulation is operating as expected to tackle the problem of concern?; or as a wider exploration of the policy approach taken?; or as a link from policy objective to outcome?] The review will be undertaken by the OLC as an exercise to check how many complaints have been made by the additional bodies added using this Order and whether their inclusion in the Ombudsman Scheme has been worthwhile.
Review approach and rationale: [e.g. describe here the review approach (in-depth evaluation, scope review of monitoring data, scan of stakeholder views, etc.) and the rationale that made choosing such an approach] As the purpose of the review is simply to ensure that those complaining to the Ombudsman are having their complaints dealt with effectively, the approach is likely to be a simple scan of the type and volume of users. It is also likely that observations may be obtained from stakeholders if it is felt that further classes of complainant should be included in the Scheme.
Baseline: [The current (baseline) position against which the change introduced by the legislation can be measured] As the Office for Legal Complaints is effectively a start up organisation and has therefore not had the opportunity to collect any data, the baseline position will be the estimate of the number of previous complaints from the relevant bodies received from the current complaints handling organisations. It is thought that this numbers around 1,300 complaints a year.
Success criteria: [Criteria showing achievement of the policy objectives as set out in the final impact assessment; criteria for modifying or replacing the policy if it does not achieve its objectives] If the policy is successful there will be evidence of use of the Ombudsman system by all of the bodies referred to in the Order. Even if no such complaints have been received, the financial status quo will have been maintained and therefore modification of the policy is unlikely to be needed.
Monitoring information arrangements: [Provide further details of the planned/existing arrangements in place that will allow a systematic collection systematic collection of monitoring information for future policy review] The OLC is currently setting up a system by which they will be able to keep records of the type of complaints they receive and the awards which are made. It is anticipated that this system will therefore allow review of how successful the inclusion of the new bodies within the Ombudsman's jurisdiction has been.
Reasons for not planning a PIR: [If there is no plan to do a PIR please provide reasons here]

Annex 2: Definition of “authorised person”.

Section 18 of the Legal Services Act (2007) defines an “authorised person” as:

- (a) a person who is authorised to carry on the relevant activity by a relevant approved regulator in relation to the relevant activity (other than by virtue of a licence under Part 5); or
- (b) a licensable body which, by virtue of such a licence, is authorised to carry on the relevant activity by a licensing authority in relation to the reserved legal activity.
