

Jurors (Scotland) Act 1825

1825 CHAPTER 22

XVIII Jurors once chosen may continue to serve.

And be it enacted, That the Jurors chosen for any particular Trial may, when that Trial is disposed of, without any new Ballot, serve on the Trials of other Persons accused, provided such Persons and the Prosecutor consent thereto, and provided also, that the Names of such Jurors are contained in the List of Assize served on the Accused, and that such Jurors are duly sworn to serve on each successive Trial.
