

British Settlements Act 1887

1887 CHAPTER 54 50 and 51 Vict

2 Power of the Queen in Council to make laws and establish courts.

It shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen in Council from time to time to establish all such laws and institutions, and constitute such courts and officers, and make such provisions and regulations for the proceedings in the said courts and for the administration of justice, as may appear to Her Majesty in Council to be necessary for the peace, order, and good government of Her Majesty's subjects and others within any British settlement.

Changes to legislation:

There are currently no known outstanding effects for the British Settlements Act 1887, Section 2.