

Fines and Recoveries Act 1833

1833 CHAPTER 74 3 and 4 Will 4

35 Where a base fee, and a protector, his consent requisite to the exercising of a power of disposition.

Provided always, that where an estate tail shall have been converted into a base fee, in such case, so long as there shall be a protector of the settlement by which the estate tail was created, the consent of such protector shall be requisite to enable the person who would have been tenant of the estate tail if the same had not been barred to exercise, as to the lands in respect of which there shall be such protector, the power of disposition herein-before contained.

Changes to legislation:

There are currently no known outstanding effects for the Fines and Recoveries Act 1833, Section 35.