EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

Part 1 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 contains provisions about the interception of communications. Section 4(1) provides that the interception of a communication is authorised (and therefore lawful) if it is carried out for the purpose of obtaining information about the communications of a person who is, or is reasonably believed to be, in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom, it relates to the use of a public telecommunications service provided to persons in that country or territory and the person who provides that service is required by the law of that country or territory to carry out, secure or facilitate the interception in question.

Under section 4(1)(d) the Secretary of State may impose additional conditions that must be met before this type of interception will be authorised. These Regulations set out those conditions.

Regulation 2 ensures that these Regulations will come into force at the same time as the Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters established by Council Act of 29th May 2000 (2000/C197/01) comes into force in the United Kingdom.
