7. Policy background

7.1 Requirements on local authorities to provide or arrange preventative services, facilities or resources

7.1.1. One of the key aims of the Act and the reforms to the care and support system is to encourage a greater focus on prevention, to ensure earlier intervention so that a person's needs may be prevented, reduced or delayed and so to maximise the person's independence and wellbeing for as long as possible. Feedback from people who use care and support has consistently shown that too often the offer of support only comes at a crisis point, when earlier action could have reduced the impact of a person's needs.

7.1.2 The Act, therefore, makes provision about the principle of preventing needs. Section 2 of the Act requires local authorities to provide or arrange for services, facilities or resources or take other steps which would prevent, delay or reduce a person's needs for care and support or (in the case of a carer) needs for support. This is separate to the provisions on meeting people's needs (under sections 18 to 20 of the Act).

7.1.2. It is anticipated that local authorities will need to take steps to identify current and future demand for preventative support and in doing so will need to consider what is already available in their area. Accordingly, section 2(2) of the Act requires local authorities to have regard to matters such as the importance of identifying services, facilities and resources already available in the area and the extent to which the authority could involve or make use of them. The duty under section 2 is aimed at benefitting the local population in general.

7.1.3. It is also anticipated that local authorities will need to cooperate with relevant organisations such as service providers in relation to the provision of preventative services, facilities or resources. Section 6 of the Act imposes a duty of co-operation on local authorities with "relevant partners" (these include health and social care providers). Many types of preventative support may additionally benefit needs other than care and support or support needs, and therefore certain services may benefit from being arranged in a joined up way with partners such as those in the NHS.

7.2 Charging for preventative support

7.2.1 The meeting of care and support needs under the Act is not necessarily free and therefore people may have to pay a charge for services provided. This is also true in relation to preventative services, and with certain exceptions the instrument allows local authorities to make a charge for the provision of services, facilities or resources or the taking of steps under section 2 of the Act. Local authorities may exercise their discretion to not charge, but it is anticipated that they may choose to do so in particular where charges are essential to making the service economically viable. Where local authorities charge for a particular service it is anticipated that they will need to consider how to balance the affordability and viability of the activity with the likely impact that charging may have on uptake, and therefore on the benefits realised.

7.2.2 The instrument imposes certain conditions on the power to charge such as those relating to the reduction of an adult's income below a certain amount. In addition some services must be provided free of charge namely intermediate care and reablement support services for the first six weeks, and aids and minor adaptations (adaptions up to the value of £1000). Certain adults must not be charged, namely those suffering from variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

7.2.3 Insofar as aids and minor adaptations are currently required to be provided free of charge as is intermediate care for a period up to six weeks, the instrument maintains the existing position. Aids and minor adaptations are currently required to be provided free of charge as is intermediate care for a period up to six weeks under the Community Care (Delayed Discharges etc) Act (Qualifying Services) (England) Regulations 2003.

8. Consultation outcome

8.1 The consultation on the package of regulations relating to Part One of the Act was published on 5 June 2014, and ran for ten weeks to 15 August. In order to reach a comprehensive and varied pool of experience and expertise, the consultation contained a mix of digital and face-to-face meetings and events with the full spectrum of stakeholders, including: people receiving care and support and their carers; social workers and other frontline practitioners; local authority finance managers, commissioners and elected members; voluntary and private social care providers; national representative groups and other charities and trusts; NHS agencies, housing departments, DWP Job Centre Plus and other key partners involved in the reforms. In total, the consultation drew over 4,000 responses from many different sources. Responses were carefully analysed and, where appropriate, changes were made to regulations.

8.2 No comments were received in relation to the proposals for charging under the instrument during consultation. Over 150 responses were received relating to prevention and all related to the guidance.

8.3 The Government response to the consultation was published on 23 October and can be found here:

9. Guidance

9.1 Statutory guidance to support implementation of Part One of the Care Act was subject to public consultation as part of the consultation on regulations under that part. The guidance was published at <https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/care-act-2014-statutory-guidance-for-implementation> on 23 October. This guidance is not itself the subject of parliamentary scrutiny.

10. Impact

10.1 A separate impact assessment has not been prepared for this instrument. The instrument is part of a package of legislative measures and the relevant impact assessment can be requested via careactconsultation@dh.gsi.gov.uk or Department of Health, Richmond House, 79 Whitehall, London SW1A 2NS and is available online at <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/2014/23/resources>.

10.2 Insofar as aids and minor adaptations and intermediate care (up to six weeks) must currently be provided free of charge, the instrument maintains the the position and does not represent a change in policy; nor does it create substantial new costs for local authorities.

11. Regulating small business

11.1 The legislation does not apply to small business.

12. Monitoring & review

12.1 The Government has committed to keeping the impact of the package of regulations under review. We will monitor the impact of implementation of the policies contained within the Act and regulations under it on an ongoing basis. This will include continuing to work closely with local government to understand the impact of implementation of the reforms.
