7. Policy background

What is being done and why?

- 7.1 Where a person leaves a final salary occupational pension scheme before normal pension age, with a preserved pension, that pension is likely to have lost value, due to inflation, by the time it is put into payment. The revaluation provisions, introduced for those who left schemes after 1 January 1986, are designed to provide a measure of protection against inflation where there is at least one full year between the member leaving the scheme and reaching its normal pension age.
- 7.2 This Order sets out the revaluation required (for that part of a pension in excess of the Guaranteed Minimum Pension rights) for people who will reach their scheme's normal pension age in 2019.
- 7.3 Pensions based on pensionable service before 6 April 2009, must be increased at least in line with the increase in the general level of prices over the whole period of deferment or 5 per cent compound per annum, whichever is lower. The Pensions Act 2008<sup>2</sup> reduced the 5 per cent compound per annum for pensions based on service from 6 April 2009, though schemes may continue to use the higher cap under scheme rules.
- 7.4 The primary legislation<sup>3</sup> requires the Secretary of State to form a judgement of the general increase in prices over the relevant inflation reference periods (ending on the 30 September) in making the Order. Since 2010, the Secretary of State has considered the Consumer Price Index (CPI) to be the most appropriate measure of inflation and CPI has again been used for the last 12 months inflation reference period. The judgement of inflation already made for the purposes of annual Orders up to and including the 2009 Order, which were based on the Retail Prices Index (RPI) measure of inflation, will not change however. This means that the revaluation percentages for periods in the last nine years are based exclusively on CPI whereas the percentages for longer periods are based on RPI for all but the last eight years of the relevant period.
- 7.5 People who left pensionable employment on or after 1 January 1991 have all preserved rights revalued, including pre-1986 service. Similarly those people with all their pensionable service falling on, or after, 1 January 1985 will have all their preserved rights revalued. People who left between 1 January 1986 and 31 December 1990 have a right to a revaluation only of the right accrued from pensionable service on or after 1 January 1985.
- 7.6 The following example shows how revaluation works: A person leaves an employment in April 1997. When they leave, the pension rights they have accrued in their occupational pension scheme are preserved within the scheme. At the time they leave in 1997 the value of their pension is £30 per week. In May 2019, the person reaches the normal pension age of their former scheme and is therefore entitled to a pension. Before the pension is put into payment, the scheme will revalue it using the appropriate percentage from the Order. For a person whose pension is all subject to revaluation at 5 per cent and has been deferred for 22 years, the appropriate percentage is 71.8 per cent. (No revaluation applies for part years.) The original amount of the pension, £30, will therefore be uplifted by this percentage to give a new pension entitlement of £51.54 per week.

<sup>3</sup> Sections 83 and 84 of, and paragraph 2 of Schedule 3 to, the Pension Schemes Act 1993

7.7 Legislation<sup>4</sup> also sets out the minimum amount by which defined benefit occupational pensions in payment have to be increased each year. Pensions accrued between 6 April 1997 and 5 April 2005, must be increased by the increase in the general level of prices capped at 5 per cent, and pensions accrued after 6 April 2005 must be increased by the increase in the general level of prices capped at 2.5 per cent. The figures to be used are those given for the one year revaluation period in the annual Revaluation Order.

7.8 The CPI figure for the year to 30 September 2018 was 2.4 per cent.

8. European Union (Withdrawal) Act/Withdrawal of the United Kingdom from the European Union

8.1 This instrument does not relate to withdrawal from the European Union / trigger the statement requirements under the European Union (Withdrawal) Act.

9. Consolidation

9.1 The Order applies to the 12 months commencing 1 January 2019. It will be followed by a new Order which will apply to the next calendar year. There is therefore no need for consolidation.

10. Consultation outcome

10.1 As explained above, primary legislation requires Secretary of State to make an Order each year, coming into force on 1 January, based on their judgement of the increase in the general level of prices up to the immediately preceding 30 September. As there is no scope for consultation to affect the outcome of this annual Order, no consultation is undertaken. The Order does not amend other legislation.

11. Guidance

11.1 All occupational pension schemes have procedures in place to implement the revaluation increases. The latest revaluation Order, coming into effect from 1 January each year, indicated which figures should be used for the calculations. No guidance is therefore necessary.

12. Impact

12.1 There is no new impact on business, charities or voluntary bodies.

12.2 There is no impact on the public sector.

12.3 An Impact Assessment has not been prepared for this instrument. There is no new impact on pension schemes in the private sector, as they are already required by law to provide protection against inflation.

13. Regulating small business

13.1 The Order applies to all final salary occupational pension schemes regardless of the size of the sponsoring employer, but has a negligible administrative impact on them.

13.2 It is not possible to mitigate the impact of the requirements on firms employing up to 50 people without an adverse effect on scheme members.
