
WELSH STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

2008 No. 1090

The Bluetongue (Wales) Regulations 2008

PART 2

Suspected and confirmed bluetongue

Temporary control zones

10.—(1) If an inspector suspects that the bluetongue virus exists on any premises, the Welsh Ministers may declare a temporary control zone.

(2) When a temporary control zone has been established in England which touches the border with Wales the Welsh Ministers may establish an associated temporary control zone in Wales.

(3) The location and size of the temporary control zone is to be such as the Welsh Ministers consider appropriate to prevent the spread of disease.

(4) Where a temporary control zone has been established, no person may move any animal on to or off premises in the zone except in accordance with a licence issued by a veterinary inspector.

(5) A temporary control zone ceases to exist in any area subsequently incorporated into a control zone or a restricted zone.

Changes to legislation:

There are currently no known outstanding effects for the The Bluetongue (Wales) Regulations 2008, Section 10.