

Claim of Right Act 1689

1689 CHAPTER 28

That the opinions of the Lords of Sessione in the two Cases following were Contrary to Law videlicet (1.) That the concealing the Demand of a Supply for a forefaulted persone altho not given is treason (2.) That persones refusing to discover what are their privat thoughts and judgements in relation to points of treason or others mens actions are guilty of treason

Changes to legislation:

There are currently no known outstanding effects for the Claim of Right Act 1689.