2011 No.

The Healthcare Improvement Scotland (Requirements as to Independent Health Care Services) Regulations 2011

Quality of independent health care

13.—(1) A provider of an independent health care service must make such arrangements as are necessary to ensure that any treatment or services provided by that service are of a quality which is appropriate to meet the needs of service users.

(2) The provider must—

- (a) introduce and maintain a system to manage risk associated with or arising from the care and treatment of service users;
- (b) review the quality of treatment and other services provided by the independent health care service, which review must involve consultation with service users and their representatives where relevant; and
- (c) produce a written record of the review carried out under sub-paragraph (b) and make this record available to HIS and service users.
