- (b) whether any price determined under paragraph (5) or adjustment determined under paragraph (6)(b) is reasonable.

Prices determined in accordance with law

19B.—(1) The price determined in accordance with law method of determining the price of qualifying defence contract or component of such a contract may be used if the Secretary of State is satisfied that the price of the goods, works and services must be set in accordance with a relevant law.

(2) Where there is an inconsistency between the pricing requirements of the relevant law and those of the Act and these Regulations, the price is to be determined in accordance with paragraph (3) or (4).

(3) Where the relevant law specifies the price which must be paid for the goods, works or services, the price is as so specified.

(4) Where the relevant law does not specify the price which must be paid for the goods, works or services, the price must comply with the pricing requirements of the relevant law and be as close as possible to the price which would have been agreed between the parties in compliance with the Act and these Regulations but for the application of the relevant law.

(5) In this regulation—

- (a) “law” includes statutes, rules, regulations, codes of practice and requirements of regulatory authorities;
- (b) “relevant law” means law, whether of the United Kingdom or otherwise, compliance with which is mandatory for at least one of the parties and which applies to the provision of goods, works or services under the contract or component.

Previously agreed price

19C.—(1) The previously agreed price method of determining the price of a qualifying defence contract or component of such a contract may be used in the circumstances specified in paragraph (3).

(2) Where the previously agreed price method is used, the price is determined in accordance with paragraph (4) or (5).

(3) The previously agreed price method may be used if—

- (a) the contract has become a qualifying defence contract by virtue of section 14(4) or (5); or
- (b) the parties to a qualifying defence contract (“contract A”) agree that an obligation to provide goods, works or services (“the transferred element”) under that contract is instead to be performed under another qualifying defence contract (“contract B”).

(4) Where paragraph (3)(a) applies—

- (a) for goods, works or services provided under the contract prior to the date on which the contract became a qualifying defence contract (“the date of conversion”), the price is that which was agreed between the parties before the date of conversion in respect of those goods, works or services;
- (b) for goods, works or services in respect of which the parties had agreed a price before the date of conversion but which have not been provided at that date, the price is, at the parties’ election, either—
 - (i) the price so agreed; or
 - (ii) the price re-determined at the date of conversion in accordance with another contract pricing method (“the relevant contract pricing method”).

(5) Where paragraph (3)(b) applies, the price for the transferred element under contract B is the price for that element under contract A immediately before it became a transferred element.

(6) Where the price of part of a contract is determined in accordance with—

- (a) paragraph (4)(a) or (b)(i), that part of the contract is a component the price of which is determined in accordance with this regulation;
- (b) paragraph (4)(b)(ii), that part of the contract is a component the price of which is determined in accordance with the relevant contract pricing method;
- (c) paragraph (5), that part of the contract is a component the price of which is determined in accordance with the contract pricing method under which the price of the transferred element was determined immediately before it became a transferred element.

Novated contract price

19D.—(1) The novated contract method of determining the price of a qualifying defence contract may be used in the circumstances specified in paragraph (3).

(2) Where the novated contract method is used, the price is determined in accordance with paragraph (4).

(3) The novated contract method may be used if—

- (a) a contract (B) replaced a contract (A);
- (b) the purpose of contract B is to ensure the performance of contractual obligations which were to be performed under contract A;
- (c) contract A was a qualifying defence contract;
- (d) at least one of the parties to contract A is also a party to contract B;
- (e) at least one of the parties to contract B was not a party to contract A; and
- (f) contract B is in all material respects (save for the identity of the parties to the contract) identical to contract A.

(4) The price determined for contract B is the price payable in respect of contract A.

(5) For the purposes of these Regulations—

- (a) contract B is to be treated as if its price was determined in accordance with the contract pricing method in accordance with which the price of contract A was determined; and
- (b) where contract A contained components, each component of contract B is to be treated as if its price was determined in accordance with the contract pricing method in accordance with which the equivalent component of contract A was determined.

Competed rates applied to uncompleted volumes

19E.—(1) The competed rates applied to uncompleted volumes (“CRUV”) method of determining the price of a qualifying defence contract or component of such a contract may be used in the circumstances specified in paragraph (3).

(2) Where the CRUV method is used, the price is determined in accordance with paragraph (4).

(3) The CRUV method may be used if—

- (a) a framework agreement is entered into in accordance with regulation 9(1) or 60(1);
- (b) the contract is awarded in accordance with regulation 9(1) or 60(1);
- (c) in relation to the goods, works or services to be provided under the contract—
 - (i) the price will be agreed using the applicable unit prices or rates contained in the framework agreement (“the competed rates or prices”); and
 - (ii) the volume of the goods, works or services to be provided will not have been subject to a competitive process; and
- (d) the conditions in regulation 9(3) or 60(3) apply to the framework agreement.

(4) The method of determining the price is to—

- (a) estimate the volume of goods, works or services required in way which secures that the volume is—
 - (i) appropriate;

- (ii) attributable to the contract; and
 - (iii) reasonable in the circumstances; and
- (b) apply that estimate to the relevant competed rates or prices in accordance with the terms of the framework agreement.

Agreed changes to the contract profit rate

19F.—(1) The agreed change to the contract profit rate price method of determining the price of a qualifying defence contract or component of such a contract may be used in the circumstances specified in paragraph (3).

(2) Where the agreed change to the contract profit rate price method is used, the price is determined in accordance with paragraph (4).

(3) The agreed change to the contract profit rate price method may be used if the contract price was originally determined or re-determined using a default pricing method, and either—

- (a) an error has been identified in the determination of the contract profit rate in accordance with regulation 11; or
- (b) the parties agree that an adjustment should be made to the contract profit rate in accordance with regulation 11(6) (“the step 3 incentive adjustment”).

(4) The method of determining the price is—

- (a) in the circumstances described in paragraph (3)(a), for the price to be adjusted by an amount which ensures that the contract profit rate is as it would have been if the error had not been made;
- (b) in the circumstances described in paragraph (3)(b), for the price to be adjusted to reflect the change to the step 3 incentive adjustment agreed between the parties.

(5) The price of the contract or component is to be treated for the purposes of these Regulations as if it was determined in accordance with the default pricing method which applied to the contract or component immediately before its price was determined in accordance with this regulation.

Aggregation of components

19G.—(1) The aggregation of components method of determining the price of a qualifying defence contract may be used where—

- (a) a contract contains two or more components; and
- (b) the parties agree to make an adjustment in accordance with paragraphs (3) to (7).

(2) The method of determining the price of such a contract is to add—

- (a) the price of each of the components (“the total component price”); and
- (b) the value of the adjustment agreed in accordance with paragraphs (3) to (7).

(3) Paragraph (4) applies where—

- (a) the contract requires the primary contractor to integrate outputs from different components of the contract; and
- (b) the parties are satisfied that the cost risk adjustments (see step 2 of regulation 11) made in respect of the components of the contract are insufficient to reflect the financial risks to the primary contractor of entering into the contract, taking account of the requirement to integrate outputs from different components of the contract.

(4) Where this paragraph applies, adjust the total component price by an amount (“the total cost risk adjustment”), so as to reflect the financial risks to the primary contractor under the contract, taking into account the particular types of activities to be carried out by the primary contractor under the contract, including the integration of outputs from different components of the contract.

(5) The total cost risk adjustment must, when added to the cost risk adjustments agreed in respect of all components of the contract, not exceed the sum of all costs risk adjustments under the contract had the parties agreed an adjustment of plus 25% of the baseline profit rate when pricing each component of the contract.

(6) Where the Secretary of State determines that the primary contractor should be given a particular financial incentive as regards the performance of provisions of the contract specified by the Secretary of State, the contract price may be increased by an amount (“the total incentive adjustment”) specified by the Secretary of State.

(7) The maximum amount of the total incentive adjustment is—

- (a) the total of any incentive adjustments (see step 3 of regulation 11) that might be made in respect of the individual components of the contract that have been priced in accordance with the default pricing method, less
- (b) the amount of all of the incentive adjustments that have been determined in accordance with regulation 11(6) in respect of that contract.”.

 - (b) the price of the contract (if the pricing amendment does not relate to a component) or component (if the pricing amendment relates to a component) was last determined in accordance with an alternative pricing method or with this Part.

Pricing amendment of contract or component priced using regulation 19A (commercial pricing)

14.—(1) This paragraph applies where the proposed pricing amendment is to a contract or component the price of which was determined in accordance with regulation 19A or this paragraph.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

Part 2 of the Defence Reform Act 2014 (c. 20) (“the Act”) establishes a regulatory framework for single source contracts (that is, contracts which are not subject to competitive tendering processes) to procure goods, works and services for defence purposes. The framework applies to qualifying defence contracts (that is, contracts to which the Secretary of State is a party and which meet the criteria in section 14(2) of the Act) and to qualifying sub-contracts (that is, contracts intended to secure the delivery of goods, works or services required under a qualifying defence contract and which meet the criteria in section 28(3) or (4) of the Act). The framework is overseen and monitored by the Single Source Regulations Office (“the SSRO”), a non-departmental public body established by the Act. The Single Source Contract Regulations 2014 (S.I. 2014/3337) (“the Principal Regulations”) were made to implement the detail of the Act’s framework.

Part 2 of the Act has been amended by Schedule 10 to the Procurement Act 2023 (c. 54) for three broad purposes—

- (a) to expand the definition of “qualifying defence contracts” to include contracts which procure goods, works and services which are substantially (as well as wholly) for defence purposes,
- (b) to authorise the introduction of a wider range of pricing methods (“alternative pricing methods”) to account for the range of commercial circumstances in which single source contracts operate, and
- (c) to more easily enable distinct parts of qualifying defence contracts to be separated into components of the contract so that they can be priced distinctly and managed appropriately.

These Regulations amend the Principal Regulations to implement the detail of these amendments to the Act. In particular—

- (a) regulation 4 substitutes regulation 3 of the Principal Regulations to provide a new definition of contracts which are “substantially for defence purposes”;
- (b) regulation 11 inserts new regulation 9A into the Principal Regulations to describe the circumstances in which a part of a contract becomes a component of the contract;
- (c) regulation 12 inserts new regulation 9B into the Principal Regulations to introduce the mechanism by which the parties to a qualifying defence contract may agree to price the contract (or a component of such a contract) using an alternative pricing method instead of an existing pricing method;
- (d) regulation 24 inserts into the Principal Regulations the descriptions of the new alternative pricing methods—
 - (i) new regulation 19A describes how to price a contract or component for the supply of goods, works or services which have previously been provided on a commercial basis;
 - (ii) new regulation 19B describes how to price a contract or component for the supply of goods, works or services the price of which is affected by law (whether of the United Kingdom or otherwise);
 - (iii) new regulation 19C describes how to price a contract which was not, but has become, a qualifying defence contract, and how to price the supply of goods, works or services which were to be provided under one qualifying defence contract and are now to be provided under another;
 - (iv) new regulation 19D describes how to price a contract which is novated;

- (v) new regulation 19E describes how to price a contract or component for the supply of goods, works or services the unit price or rate of which has been agreed pursuant to a competitive process, but the volume has not;
- (vi) new regulation 19F describes how to price a contract or component where there has been error in the calculation of the contract profit rate under regulation 11, or where the parties agree that a change should be made to the incentive adjustment element of contract profit rate;
- (vii) new regulation 19G describes how to price a contract which contains components where the parties wish to make an adjustment to the price to account for commercial risk arising from the aggregation of the components;
- (e) regulations 26 to 35 amend Part 5 of the Principal Regulations, primarily to modify and expand contract reporting requirements to secure that components of contracts are properly reported on;
- (f) regulations 39 and 40 amend regulations 51 and 52 of the Principal Regulations to expand the matters on which the SSRO is required to give an opinion or make a determination, primarily in consequence of the introduction of alternative pricing mechanisms;
- (g) regulation 42 amends regulation 65 of the Principal Regulations to secure that the amendments made by these Regulations are modified appropriately in their application to qualifying sub-contracts;
- (h) regulation 43 amends the Schedule to the Principal Regulations, primarily to add a new Part 4 of that Schedule which deals with the re-determination of the price of a qualifying defence contract, or a component of such a contract, which was originally priced under an alternative pricing mechanism and which is subsequently amended.

These Regulations make further minor amendments to the Principal Regulations in consequence of the amendments to the Act and to correct errors.
