

CHAPTER ii.

An Act to amend Lloyd's Act, 1871. [27th April 1888.] A.D. 1888.

WHEREAS by Lloyd's Act 1871 (in this Act referred to as "the Act of 1871") certain persons were united into a society or corporation for the purposes of that Act and were incorporated by the name of Lloyd's (which incorporated body was by the Act of 1871 and is in this Act referred to as "the Society"):

And whereas by the Act of 1871 (section ten) it was enacted that the objects of the Society should among other things be the "collection publication and diffusion of intelligence and information with respect to shipping":

And whereas since the passing of the Act of 1871 it has been found that the Society by means of their stations at home and abroad and by their officers and servants are enabled to obtain intelligence and information of various kinds which may not be considered to be within the words "with respect to shipping" in section ten of the Act of 1871 which intelligence and information experience has shown to be of public utility and benefit and it is expedient that section ten of the Act of 1871 should be amended as herein-after provided:

And whereas the objects aforesaid cannot be attained without the authority of Parliament:

May it therefore please Your Majesty that it may be enacted and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in this present Parliament assembled and by the authority of the same (as follows):
