EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

These Regulations further amend the Education (Induction Arrangements for School Teachers (England) Regulations 1999 (S.I.1999/1065).

From 1st September 2000 an induction period can be served in a sixth form college, defined as a further education institution mainly concerned with providing full-time education suitable for young persons under the age of 19. The governing body of the college must first have agreed with a local education authority that they will act as the appropriate body.

Where a teacher is serving induction at more than one school or sixth form college simultaneously, the Regulations now make provision for the head teachers of those institutions to agree that one of their number will act as lead head teacher with responsibility for the teacher's supervision and training and for making a recommendation to the appropriate body when the induction period is complete. The appropriate body in relation to the lead head teacher's school will carry out the appropriate body functions.

Regulation 15 adds teachers who have successfully completed induction in the Isle of Man to the list in Schedule 1 of cases in which teachers are exempt from the requirement to serve an induction period.

The regulations also make other consequential amendments.
