6. Legislative Context

- 6.1 Section 54 of the Regulatory Reform (Scotland) Act 2014 (“the 2014 Act”) amended the Marine (Scotland) Act 2010 to provide for a statutory appeal to the Court of Session in respect of (a) marine licensing decisions on applications for electricity generating stations in Scottish internal waters and the territorial sea adjacent to Scotland and (b) decisions on whether to have a public inquiry in relation to such applications.

- 6.2 The 2015 Order was made in consequence of section 54 of the 2014 Act. It amended the 1989 Act by inserting section 36D and paragraph 5B of Schedule 8 to provide for the same statutory appeal procedure in respect of Scottish Ministers' decisions taken on applications for section 36 consent, and decisions on whether or not to cause a public inquiry to be held in respect of such applications under that Act, in relation to "relevant waters" – defined as Scottish internal waters and the territorial sea adjacent to Scotland.
- 6.3 This instrument is made to correct an oversight in the 2015 Order by amending the definition of "relevant waters" in section 36D(6) of, and paragraph 5B(6) of Schedule 8 to, the 1989 Act, so as to include the Scottish part of the REZ.

7. Policy background

What is being done and why?

- 7.1 This Order ensures that the same appeal mechanism applies whether there is a challenge against a decision of the Scottish Ministers on an application for a marine licence under the Marine and Coastal Act 2009 or on an application for a section 36 consent under the 1989 Act, in relation to an energy generating station development to be situated in Scottish internal waters, territorial sea and the Scottish part of the REZ.
- 7.2 The purpose of the 2014 Act is to improve the way regulation is developed and applied, creating more favourable business conditions in Scotland and delivering benefits for the environment. The Act accelerates the procedure by which appeals are determined by fast-tracking legal challenges to minimise the impact of delays on such infrastructure projects arising from recourse to the courts.
- 7.3 This instrument is to be laid following another instrument, the Scotland Act 1998 (Transfer of Functions to the Scottish Ministers) Order 2019. That Order provides that a Minister of the Crown's regulation making functions under the European Communities Act 1972, designated to them under the European Communities (Designation) Order 2008 (S.I. 2008/301), and exercisable in relation to assessing the effects on the environment of the construction, extension or operation of generating stations under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 in the Scottish Part of the REZ, are exercisable concurrently with the Scottish Ministers. This Explanatory Memorandum should be read in conjunction with the EM to that instrument.
