EXPLANATORY NOTES

COMMENTARY

Part VII: Northern Ireland

Section 104: Police powers: records

87. This section places a requirement on the Chief Constable of the RUC to make arrangements for records to be kept when powers are exercised under this Part of the Act. It is envisaged that records will be kept unless there are reasons which make this impractical: for example following a major incident when the police by necessity would need to stop and question large numbers of people.
